Source: Windows Central If you recorded a video using your phone or digital camera and you ended up with a very long video, or you want to crop unwanted recordings, you don't need to spend money or install complicated third-party tools. The Windows 10 Photos app includes a powerful video editor that lets you trim one or more parts of a video silently easily. In this Windows 10 guide, we'll guide you through the steps to trim videos using the Photos app. To trim a video using the Photos app To trim a video using Photos on Windows 10, follow these steps: Open Photos. Click the video you want to edit. Click the Edit & Create button in the upper-right corner and select the Trim option. Source: Windows Central Use the white (right and left) pins to select the part of the video you want to trim. Use the blue pin to scrub the recordings to ensure that you trim the correct part. Source: Windows Central Click the Save a Copy button in the upper right corner. After you complete the steps, the Photos app processes the video, and you end up with a trimmed version of the file with only the part you want to keep. However, the feature does not edit the original video. Instead, a new file is created with the new recording. If you're trying to save space after you've completed the cropping process and making sure the video is the way you want it, be sure to delete the original video from the Photos Collections tab. To trim multiple parts of a video using Photos Even if the trimming option doesn't let you edit multiple parts of the video, you can use the video editor to perform this task. To trim multiple parts of a video, follow these steps: Open Photos. Click the Select button in the upper-right corner. Source: Windows Central Check the video you want to edit. Click the new video button from the toolbar. Select the New video project option. Source: Windows Central Enter a name for the project. Click the OK button. Source: Windows Central Select the video clip from the storyboard. Click the Share button from the toolbar. Source: Windows Central Select the section that contains the first part of the video you want to trim. Source: Windows Central Click the Done button. Select the remaining part of the video. (Usually the one on the right side.) Click the Share button again. Source: Windows Central Select the section that contains the second part of the video you want to trim. Source: Windows Central Click the Done button. Repeat step no. Select the first shared clip from the storyboard. Click the Trim button from the toolbar. Source: Windows Central Use the blue pins to adjust the part of the video to trim. Source: Windows Central Quick Tip: When trimming the video, just move the pins inward, as if you're moving the right pin outwards, you can stop changing the previous sharing settings for the clip. Click the Play button to preview the clip. Click the Done button. Step No. Click the Play button from the preview section. Click the Finish Video button in the upper-right corner. Source: Windows Central Use the Video Quality drop-down menu and select the quality of the video. For example, High 1080p (recommended). Under the Move options section, select the Use hardware-accelerated encoding (if available) check box. Click the Export button. Source: Windows Central Select the destination folder. For example, the Photos folder. Click the Export button. After you complete the steps, the Photos app processes your project, and it only creates a new video with the sections you trimmed. We focus this guide on the steps to trim a video, but the Photos app offers many features to create a video project. You can learn more using our comprehensive guide with everything you need to know to use the video editing tool that comes with Photos.
